

PENN SYMPOSIUM ON CONTEMPORARY CHINA

University of Pennsylvania

Call For Paper Submissions

About Us

The Penn Symposium on Contemporary China is an annual event organized by undergraduate students from the University of Pennsylvania. We aim to provide a unique high-level academic forum for the discussion of the political, diplomatic, security, legal, economic, and social factors shaping China in the world today. The 2020 Symposium will take place on Friday, March 20 on Penn's campus. The 2020 conference will feature NPR correspondent and author of The Shanghai Free Taxi, Frank Langfitt, as the keynote address speaker.

Who do we feature?

The Symposium is currently reaching out to top graduate students across the U.S. to present their research on pressing contemporary issues facing China and its role in the world. In addition to providing a public forum for young scholars to share and discuss their findings, the Symposium is also a platform for prominent speakers from the business, foreign affairs, civil society, and academic sectors to share their professional insights.

Call for Paper Submissions

The application period for graduate student research papers is now open!

Please submit for review (1) your paper along with (2) an abstract of 300 words or less and (3) a short biography of 100 words or less by January 31st, 2020. Please note this in an extension from our original deadline of January 24th. All application materials should be sent to: contact@pennchina.org.

Contact Information

Center for the Study of Contemporary China
Perelman Center for Political Science & Economics
133 South 36th St, Suite 416
Philadelphia, PA 19104-6215
contact@pennchina.org
215-746-2497

Penn Arts & Sciences
Center for the Study of Contemporary China